Claims 100-112 are withdrawn from further consideration pursuant to 37 CFR 1.142(b), as being drawn to a nonelected invention, there being no allowable generic or linking claim. Applicant timely traversed the restriction (election) requirement in Paper filed June 4, 2003.

Claims 83-99 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph, as failing to comply with the enablement requirement. The claim(s) contains subject matter which was not described in the specification in such a way as to enable one skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and/or use the invention. Claims 83-112 are directed to a method of treating or slowing progression of a lipid disorder or arteriosclerosis with a vast number of steroid compounds having substantially different chemical structures. However, the specification fails to provide any evidence that any steroid compounds encompassed by the instant claims possess any activity in the treatment of lipid disorder or arteriosclerosis. Since steroids are not known to possess such activity, there is good reason to doubt the effectiveness of the claimed method. Further, for example, a compound wherein one R1 is OH, the other R1 is H, one of R2 is OH, the other R2 is H, R3 is H and R4 is OH would not be expected to have the same activity as a compound wherein one of R1 is a substituted oligosaccharide, the other R1 is a n oligonucleotide, one of R2 is a substituted oligosaccharide, the other R2 is an oligonucleotide, R3 is a peptide and R4 is oligosaccharide. It would take an undue amount of experimentation to determine which specific compounds encompassed by the instant claims possess the desired activity. Also the specification fails to provide any guidance on how to use the claimed compounds i.e. the specification fails to describe the effective dosage and mode of administration.

Claims 83-99 rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph, as failing to comply with the written description requirement. The claim(s) contains subject matter which was not described in the specification in such a way as to reasonably convey to one skilled in the relevant art that the inventor(s), at the time the application was filed, had possession of the claimed invention. The terminology "lipid disorder" is not disclosed or suggested by the specification as originally filed.

(a) the invention was known or used by others in this country, or patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country, before the invention thereof by the applicant for a patent.

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

This application currently names joint inventors. In considering patentability of the claims under 35 U.S.C. 103(a), the examiner presumes that the subject matter of the various claims was commonly owned at the time any inventions covered therein were made absent any evidence to the contrary. Applicant is advised of the obligation under 37 CFR 1.56 to point out the inventor and invention dates of each claim that was not commonly owned at the time a later invention was made in order for the examiner to consider the applicability of 35 U.S.C. 103(c) and potential 35 U.S.C. 102(e), (f) or (g) prior art under 35 U.S.C. 103(a).

Art Unit: 1623

Claims 83-99 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(a) as anticipated by or, in the alternative, under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as obvious over Dowell et al (U.S. Patent No. 5,859,000).

Dowell et al disclose administration of steroid derivatives which are encompassed by the instant claims. Since the instant claims encompass administration of the steroid compounds to a subject which is susceptible to developing a condition i.e. a subject which does not have a lipid disorder or arteriosclerosis, the instant claims read on the administration of said steroid compounds as encompassed by Dowell et al i.e. the claimed method is inherent in the reference's method..
